Police spokesman Dmitry Moskovtsev said Friday that an explosive device, possibly a gas pipe bomb, went off in a central part of the building, causing the blast. He said the group was behind the bombing. The blast was in the sixth floor of the building and could be heard from a nearby metro station. Moskovtsev said video footage showed two men in an apartment. One was shirtless and brandishing a firearm. The other was wearing an explosives vest. The men are believed to have set off a pipe bomb which exploded. Moskovtsev said the two men were not on drugs and were apparently part of a "terrorist group." He said he could not elaborate on the group's activities, but added it "in no way" was connected to the local Chechen community. He did not disclose the suspected motive, but said "probably we will know this in the foreseeable future." Moskovtsev said the woman who had initially called police to report the noise may have been responsible for the blast. The blast, which occurred Sunday afternoon, sent a plume of black smoke into the sky and sent the women screaming and children screaming, leaving glass and debris scattered on the floor of the metro station below. Moscow's deadliest bombing in over a decade killed dozens in a car bombing on Oct. 31 that also wounded 40 people. Moskov
