Here's a closer look at the technology in action, and how it can benefit you on the pitch. Motion-capture technology The FIFA community has come to trust what the technology has to offer. More than 10 million players worldwide have downloaded the game's motion capture and DICE Institute tests on athletes have shown the accuracy of data created by the game's motion capture. In Fifa 22 Full Crack, the motion capture features have been improved upon, especially for the new control scheme. In FIFA 17, the players' movements were captured on the shoulder and the chest, but in FIFA 22, the data is gathered at both sides of the body, which enables the team's data to be used by the game's AI, as well as by the player models. The amount of data is big enough that we can for the first time use it to create a centralized player model of a specific player. The data from three matches of different phases and situations is combined to bring that centralized player model to life. The challenge is obviously how do you define a player model in a very realistic way? Once you have the data, it's a matter of using sensors to capture the movements of the players and defining key gestures and actions. If all the players move like this, this and that, then there is a certain sense of realism. The DICE Institute also collects data, which, through its 3D and motion capture technology, tries to imitate the players' movements in a real match. That data is then used to drive the features in the game. How players interact with the ball is an example of one of the areas where the new motion capture technology can be applied. For example, under high-intensity play, such as an opposition player charging towards you and the defender doing their job, the AI will move in such a way as to try and block the attack, or at least to slow down the opposition. In this case the movement of the player is based on the data collected from the motion capture suits. The AI can even develop a tactic based on the movements of all the opponents and if all the players move in this manner, the defender's job becomes easier. The AI will also execute a tactical plan of its own in order to make sure it isn't always attacked the same way. Giving AI even more breathing room In FIFA 17, the AI was more

VOTE: Which FIFA game is your favorite? FIFA is the world's biggest football brand and the number one sports game of all time. The EA SPORTS FIFA franchise has sold more than 300 million copies worldwide to date and continues to set the benchmark in the sports genre. The FIFA series also boasts the biggest Live Team feature set in the industry, most televised events and the most licensed content and players. Player ratings - All-Time High The FIFA franchise has always had world-class talent in its player and club rosters, but in FIFA 20, EA Sports delivers the game's highest player ratings ever. With the help of FIFA's highest-rated season ever and a new presentation of all-time ratings, it's finally possible for players to be rated a realistic 11,000. Featuring enhanced animations, 2,000 new facial expressions and cuts, improved hair and AI, FIFA 20 is the definitive platform for the game. The kits - New suit, new glory FIFA 20 brings a new look to the game, with a fresh new design of both the kits and stadiums. Starting with the new National Team kits, the finest football kits have been brought to life with enhanced graphics. The gear was designed in close collaboration with the national teams themselves. The all-new presentation of player and club ratings allows for the biggest, most realistic-looking player roster to date. FIFA 20 also offers the first-ever National Team Career mode, featuring new game modes and an all-new presentation, allowing players the opportunity to go up from grassroots level through all the different terrains of the professional game. The gameplay - All-new dribbling controls FIFA 20 changes the way players control the ball. New dribbling controls enables players to accelerate, decelerate, turn in mid-air and alter their angle on the ball. FIFA 20 also introduces the ability to shoot from any angle during real-time gameplay. FIFA 20 includes new role-specific controls for defensive, midfield and attacking players, making it easy to play your game the way you want. New Shoot-on-sight controls for X and Z, as well as dedicated control buttons for shooting and passing make every shot a winner. The new player models - All-new AI Vibrant, believable, reactive AI will help dictate play for the first time in FIFA. Driven by decision-making technology and new player models, players bc9d6d6daa
