

by P WELFARE: 1995, Jonathan Mitchell criticises job cut programs...and unemployment about 11 times in the last 120 years. A corpus linguist may attempt to provide missing information, e.g. emails may be re-written. Written, but we will never read them the way they were originally written. We will never be able to read letters if we do not understand individual words in them. In the same way, we will never be able to read programs to reduce employment and unemployment if we do not understand what each word means. But we will have to try, because we all see that we can never avoid these words in our lives, although we may try to "control" them.
